IN WHAT PRECINCT?

Voters from Precincts Three and Four Will Cast Ballots in New Polling Places at Coming Primaries

Are you sure you know in what precinct you live and where to go to cast your ballot in the primaries to be held September 12?

For the first time Andover will have four polling places to accommodate the voters of Precincts 1, 2, 3, and 4. This rearrangement with two additional precincts was made necessary by the greatly increased registration of voters when women were enfranchised and was authorized at a special town meeting.

The polling place for the center of the town, Precinct 1, will be at the town house. A part of West Parish has been added to Ballardvale to form Precinct 2, and voters from that section will cast their ballots at the Old Schoolhouse in Ballardvale. Precinct 3, which includes Shawheen Village and that part of West Andover north of Lowell street, will have the polling booths at the Shawheen Village Boys' Clubhouse on Haverhill street. Precinct 4 begins with the south side of Morton street and voters from the southern part of the town will find their headquarters in the small brick building which was formerly the Phillips Academy office.

The precinct voting lists will be posted at their respective polling places and every voter should see that his or her name is on the list. This is an obligation on the part of the voters and is not incumbent on the registrars.

In order to assist the citizens in determining to which precinct they belong, a list of the streets in each precinct is given below.

It is important to note that parts of Bartlett street and School street, Morton street, Central street and Main street are in

The field day of the group of older girls at Camp Andover and their farewell banquet Tuesday evening brought to a close the third successful season which this camp has enjoyed on the shores of Poughkeepsie pond. On Wednesday morning the girls left for their homes in greater Boston, the last group of the nearly 300 boys and girls who have been entertained during the months of July and August.

Heavy showers did not prevent the presentation of the cantata "Ruth" which the older girls of Camp Andover had prepared as the special event for the field day held last Saturday afternoon. Every girl in the camp had some part in the presentation either as principal, gleener or member of the chorus. The costumes were pretty and effective.

The cantata was given under the direction of Miss Carita Bigelow and Miss Marjorie Holmes. The singing was in charge of camp counselor Lillian Olsen. Miss Olive Mitchell of the Free church, Andover, took the part of a gleener.

Many parents and friends of the campers were present from greater Boston as well as several visitors from Andover.

The cantata was given in three parts and the participants were as follows:

"The End of the Rainbow"

An outline of the entertainment planned for "The End of the Rainbow," the elaborate pageant to be given next month for the benefit of the Andover Theological Seminary, was enthusiastically received when it was presented by H. Winthrop Peirce before the members of the general committee assembled at the home of Douglas Crawford on Sunday afternoon.

The pageant will take place in the Town Hall on the evenings of October 26, 27 and 28, with a children's matinee on Saturday afternoon. As the name of the affair suggests, the decorations will be in the colors of the spectrum—orange, yellow, green, blue, violet, and indigo, and some wonderful color effects may be looked for when Mr. Peirce's plans are carried out.

There will be a program of several numbers each evening, followed by general dancing, with special features for the children on Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. H. Winthrop Peirce is chairman of the costume committee and Miss Alice Jenkins has charge of the decorations. Miss Vivian Taylor will have charge of drilling those who take part in the dances.

The tables will be as follows:—

Move to Block Opening of Theological School

Judge Crosby of the Supreme Court Tuesday took under advisement a bill brought by the Visitors of the Theological Institute in Phillips Academy in Andover against the trustees of the Andover Theological Seminary, the president and fellows of Harvard College and the Attorney General, seeking to restrain the carrying out of an agreement for closer affiliation of the Andover Theological Seminary and Harvard Divinity School.

The newly formed Theological School of Harvard University is scheduled to open September 1 and the effect of an injunction would be to prevent its opening, for which preparations have been made since June. A dean and a faculty have been selected.

The number of students in both theological schools affected by the controversy is about 50, but involved in the litigation is $1,000,000 in funds, many ancient deeds, differences in religious beliefs and other matters.

One issue raises the legality of an Orthodox theological school joining with a school that was for years a Unitarian theological school, but the real vital point in controversy is a clause in the agreement for affiliation under which Harvard has the right to approve the professors to be appointed to the new school.

The plaintiff corporation was formed in 1923, having an overseeing power over about $360,000 worth of the total of $1,000,000 in funds that have been contributed during the last century and a quarter to the Andover Theological Seminary. The trustees of this institution have the say over the remainder of the money.

Last July the visitors declared the agreement for affiliation of the two schools entered into by the trustees of the seminary and by the president and fellows of Harvard to be null. Thereupon the trustees brought a bill in equity in the Supreme Court to prevent the visitors having anything to say about the uniting of the two schools, contending that the visitors are a corporation formed in violation of the Federal constitution.

A few days ago the visitors brought this bill in equity asking for an injunction to stop the affiliation and the opening of the new school.

Thomas Weston, counsel for the visitors and a member of that corporation itself, which consists of two Congregational churches, besides him, said to the court: "The Andover Theological Seminary was established in 1808 to combat the growing tendency toward Unitarianism. Soon after that the Harvard Divinity School was formed to counteract the growth of orthodox theology and a large fund was raised to maintain it. At the present time the total student body of the two theological schools comprises no more than 50 students. The Andover fund at stake amounts to something over $1,000,000.

"The visitors when they objected to the agreement for affiliation and for the formation out of the two schools of the theological school of Harvard University had in mind the action of the Supreme Court in nullifying the transfer by Harvard to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology of the Gordon McKay fund and had urged the trustees of the seminary to bring a petition for instructions in the Supreme Court to see in the affiliation of the two divinity schools were legally possible.

The trustees did not do this. Therefore, the visitors were forced to bring this bill.

"Under the terms of this agreement, for example, say there are six professors and the trustees propose to abandon three professorships, and to use the money saved to increase the salaries of the remaining three; Harvard has six professors and will simply decline to fill three chairs.

"Also the control of the teaching force is put absolutely into the hands of Harvard.

"We feel that we should have a temporary injunction to prevent the taking of this further step (the opening of the new school Sept. 1) when the Supreme Court may later say the agreement is void. This is in the nature of a cross bill to the bill which is an appeal from the decision of the visitors against the agreement the trustees entered into. We feel that to take various donations to this school, which were all given for specific purposes, and hand them over to another institution would be unfair and illegal. And there is the further difficulty in this matter that may arise, that is, the difficulty of unscrambling the whole affair if the Full Bench should say that the agreement is illegal."

Judge Crosby: "I don't understand you allege this is a scheme to change the Andover Theological Seminary over to a Unitarian school?"

Attorney Weston: "No; except that the Harvard Divinity School, now nondenominational, and I think made so by special act in order to make it eligible to the benefits of the Carnegie Foundation, nevertheless, for 100 years prior, though claiming to be nondenominational, was actually a Unitarian school. Andover since 1898 has been nondenominational."

"The nub of the matter," went on attorney Weston, "is this. The selection of professors as a practical matter under this agreement rests entirely not with the trustees but with Harvard University."

Judge Crosby: "Well, if this school is to be carried on as a nondenominational school, and there are only 50 students in the two schools as thus combined, wouldn't it be a good idea to lessen the number of professors so as to cut out all unnecessary expenses?"

"Possibly," went on attorney Weston, "but the money left by the donors was for another purpose than this new school."

Judge Crosby: "But that's another question. Now, that's the ground, isn't it, that the proposal by this agreement is to change the character of the school from an Orthodox school?"

Attorney Weston thought this was not all but that the control of the $1,000,000 fund and the appointment of professors were important.

Attorney Robert G. Dodge, counsel for the trustees of the Andover Theological Seminary, said: "The visitors have nothing to do with any of the $1,000,000 fund except those donations to it, amounting to about $300,000, subject to their visitations."

"There is a serious question if the visitors can maintain this bill in their own name, whether they ought not to get the Attorney General to lend his name to it. It seems an extraordinary thing to ask for a temporary injunction to stop the opening of this new school. For no irreparable damage can be done by the opening of the school, even should the full bench decide against us. But if a temporary injunction is issued, as preparations have been in progress toward the opening of this school since last June. A very distinguished congregational minister has been elected as dean of the new school."

"Now this is not a merger; it does not take away the funds of Andover and it does not limit its power of appointing or selecting professors. The bill is faulty in that it does not set forth what specific violation there has been, as alleged, of the constitution of the Andover Theological Seminary by the acceptance of this agreement."

"Harvard Divinity School has long since ceased to be a Unitarian school. There is nothing in the agreement which delegates to Harvard the carrying-out of the duties by the Andover Seminary trustees. There is nothing to prevent the trustees of Andover Seminary, no matter what professors may be selected for the new school, from selecting some others to their liking and paying them. The difficulties of the Harvard-Tech merger are wholly avoided in this agreement."

Judge Crosby: "Do you claim the visitors under the agreement still have control over the funds?"

"Certainly," replied Atty. Dodge, "over those funds over which they were originally given control, a portion of the $1,000,000."

Atty Weston here explained as his conception of what things would be under the agreement for closer affiliation, "If Andover wants to play the game, she must play it as Harvard says."

Judge Crosby: "Well, the visitors still have authority over the $360,000. Won't the decision in the other bill (brought by the trustees against the visitors) settle this case?"

Atty. Weston: "The Supreme Court might overrule our decision voiding the agreement, but that decision wouldn't go into the merits of the case."

"The real point of the case is that feature of it comprised under a clause of the agreement declaring that the faculty of the new school shall include such professors as Harvard may approve; but that faculty is now complete."

Crosby: "For how long are they appointed—a year?"

Mr. Dodge: "Indefinitely—I suppose they could be removed."

Mr. Dodge here read a letter of a few days ago from Rev. C. L. Noyes, stating, "Two leading fallacies are committed by the view of the visitors: first, that Andover was ever committed to Congregationalism; second that Harvard is Unitarian."

Mr. Dodge went on: "Andover can appoint her own professors of theology and put them right there; they simply don't fear the title professor in the new school."

Mr. Dodge also said that professors proposed for the new school could certainly be disapproved only on a question of scholarship, according to the opinion of another clergyman.

Mr. Dodge said: "Almost everybody wants to see this thing go through. A temporary injunction would virtually put the Andover Theological Seminary out of business for a year and a half."

A. A. Schaefer, who stated that he appeared for the president and fellows of Harvard College, said, "I am in accord with my brother Dodge."

Judge Crosby said he wasn't familiar enough with the case to decide it offhand and added he would take the matter under advisement.

A substitute for cardboard and wood in boxes is a chemical composition of sawdust and asbestos. The finished boxes are light, washable, sanitary and non-poisonous. They are waterproof and as fireproof as asbestos and can be made in any degree of flexibility or texture, either as hard as oak, tough as metal or pliable as cardboard. A pound of the substance from which the boxes are made costs not more than five cents.

The Use of Soft Coal

This is the time for householders to give thought to the problem of keeping warm this winter. There is sure to be an anthracite shortage that will be felt more in homes than elsewhere. As for factories, big apartments and business blocks, soft coal and oil will furnish heat and motor power for them. The prospect now is that there will be no serious shortage in soft coal and that it will, therefore, be more available for general use.

Homes can be heated in the absence of hard coal by coke; and in the absence of coke, bituminous coal can be pressed into service. There may be more smoke and dust and other inconveniences, but there are millions of American homes that have through experience found out how to use the bituminous fuel for heating purposes, and this knowledge is neither exclusive nor limited. Soft coal users know, for instance, that this kind of fuel requires more careful watching; that it is not so responsive to drafts and that it cannot be banked as can a hard coal fire. But when carefully used it will do what is required effectively.

Wise householders should have the furnace fixed for the use of bituminous coal and then book up on the best methods of promoting combustion.

Wedding

McKEE—SLATER

A very pretty wedding took place Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock in St. Paul's church, North Andover, when Miss Edith A. Slater, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Slater, 21 Merrimack street, became the bride of Russell Vincent McKee, son of Mr. and Mrs. William McKee of Port Washington, L. I.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. Usher Munro, rector emeritus of St. Paul's church. The single ring service was used. Miss Edith Knowles played the wedding march.

The bride was prettily attired in a gown of white tulle and wore a white hat. She carried a shower bouquet of orchids, lily of the valley and brides roses.

Miss Muriel Spurr, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid. She wore a gown of grey tulle and carried a black velvet hat and carried pink roses.

Clifford Slater, brother of the bride, was best man.

A wedding dinner was served the bridal party at the Copley Plaza in Boston after the ceremony. Only members of the immediate families attended the wedding.

The couple were the recipient of numerous gifts.

After a wedding trip the couple will reside in Roxbury.

The bridegroom is a superintendent for the Turner Construction company and was formerly employed on work in Shawheen Village.

Dr. Scudder Fully Recovers

The many friends of Dr. and Mrs. Doremus Scudder in Andover, will be pleased to hear of Dr. Scudder's complete recovery from the recent automobile accident, which nearly cost him his life. His recovery is regarded by his friends as little less than a miracle. Dr. Scudder returned to his office Monday as executive secretary of the Greater Boston Federation of Churches.

Surgical art has in Dr. Scudder an example of supreme achievement. Scarcely four weeks ago a heavy automobile wheel crushed his head into a gravel road, breaking his skull, fracturing his skull, cracking his jaw, gouging out one of his eyebrows and taking nearly all the skin from his face. He stepped from the train Tuesday at North Station with scarcely a mark on his features to show what had happened to him. A small hole over his right eye and a slight droop to the lid stand as sole reminders of the tragedy, so far as outward appearance goes.

On his calendar in his office, Dr. Scudder marked, when he left for Williamstown a month ago, "Back Aug. 28." He fought every minute to keep his appointment and to maintain his reputation for punctuality.

While he will not take immediate charge of office details and will give his mind a further rest, his full recovery and resumption of duties in connection with the federation is confidently expected at an early date.

Dr. Scudder was married to Miss Mabelle Boshier, who was for many years assistant to the late Miss Means, principal of Abbot Academy.

Attended Graphic Arts Exposition

Among those who took advantage of this opportunity to see materials, machinery and processes of printing and allied industries were Miss Mary Riley, Miss Ruth Saunders, Miss Mildred Morse, Miss Bessie P. Goldsmith, David Coutts, Lewis Paine, John Carden, Walter Vogel, George A. Scott, Moritz Heerde, George Collins, Peter Dumont, A. Dumont, Frank Sweeney, James McSwiggan and Fred McCollum.

Joyce Place Changes Hands

Edward M. Rickard has purchased the Joyce estate on North Main street and the family is already in residence.

Mr. Rickard is a well-known Haverhill shoe manufacturer, being the owner of the Claremont Shoe Company and Rickard Shoe Company. Mr. Rickard and his family made their home in Haverhill prior to moving to Andover.

Important Meeting of Legion Auxiliary

A very important meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary to the American Legion will be held in the Legion rooms next Thursday evening, September 7, at half past seven o'clock. Please note the change in hour.

The election of a chaplain to fill the vacancy of Mrs. Markham W. Stackpole resigned is one of the important matters to come before the meeting. Delegates will be elected to represent the auxiliary at the caucus to be held at Danvers on September 17, also at the state convention to be held at the State House, Boston, on September 22 and 23.

Installation of officers will take place promptly at nine o'clock. Mrs. Marshman, president of the Lawrence auxiliary, will be the installing officer.

The auxiliary to Andover Post 8 now numbers 96. Help to make it 100 before September 7!

Labor Sunday at the South Church

According to custom the observance of Labor Day will be marked on Sunday morning by a sermon upon the theme of "Manual Toil" preached by the pastor who has returned from his mission. An additional feature of the service this year will be the presentation of an American flag to the church by the Andover Woman's Relief Corps. The flag is a large one and will be hung from a staff reaching out of the church belfry over the front entrance on Labor Day.

Celebrated 83rd Birthday

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Ramsay of Wollaston, who are visiting their daughter, Mrs. Barbara Ramsay Chase of North Main street, were given a genuine surprise Tuesday night when a number of Mrs. Ramsay's friends gathered and helped her celebrate her 83rd birthday. It was a very happy party and Mrs. Ramsay enjoyed the companionship of many she had known in former days in Scotland. Mr. Ramsay will celebrate his 84th birthday on Saturday, September 9.

Mr. and Mrs. Ramsay were married in Arbroath, Scotland, fifty-six years ago, and over twenty years ago came to America and settled in East Boston. Recently, however, they had made their home with their son John Ramsay in Wollaston. Both are well known here and have spent extended vacations in town with their daughter, Mrs. Chase, and also with their son, James Ramsay, now of Ludlow, but who was for many years blacksmith for the Smith & Dove Company.

Mr. and Mrs. Ramsay are both enjoying good health and their many friends here extend their congratulations.

Hit While Crossing Reading Road

A Ford truck owned by R. N. C. Barnes of Sunset Rock road and operated by Elmer Perkins of 87 Eastwood avenue East Lynn was hit by a car operated by Daniel Cleary of 813 Main street last Monday morning about eight o'clock as the driver was attempting to cross the Reading road from Wildwood to Ballardvale road.

The truck was hit broadside and forced over the stonewall. The running board, left front wheel, mudguard, headlight and radiator were damaged, but the machine was able to proceed under its own power.

S. & D. A. A. in Soccer League

Smith & Dove A. A. has entered a team in the soccer league and at a meeting Tuesday night it was announced that practically the whole of last year's team will be available. Andover is the oldest team in this district and has been in the field continuously for 25 years.

John Coleman, Harry Armour and Eddie Downs were appointed a committee to get in touch with the players and report at a meeting of the association this evening.

Smith & Dove Volley Ball League

The Volley ball league of the Smith & Dove A. A. is creating much interest and the games Wednesday night resulted in a three point win for the Mill 5 team, leaders, over Mill No. 1, while Repair Shop No. 2 took two from the Office team. The game has made a big hit and the courts on the association field are well patronized. The team representing Mill No. 5 has won every game to date.

The volleyball team has challenged the Methodist church team of Ballardvale to a series of games. The Methodist team is unbeaten as yet in its home games and the Smith & Dove team is bound not to be beaten, so if the series comes off the games will be interesting. They may be played either on the Methodist volleyball court in Ballardvale or on the Smith & Dove grounds.

The teams in the Smith & Dove volleyball league which are practicing to perfect this latest addition to the field of sports, have posted the league standing which is as follows:

Team	Won	Lost	Pct.

Camp Andover has been particularly fortunate in its directors and counselors.
For the third year Rev. F. B. Withington was camp director and he was assisted by Rev. John C. Schroeder, assistant pastor of the Central church, Boston, who is treasurer and assistant director; Rev. Edwin E.
Aiken, assistant pastor of the Second church, Dorchester, and Fred P. Latimer, Jr., of New London, Yale, 1925.

The camp was fortunate also in its athletic directors. The aquatics were in charge of Richard S. Hayes, all round swimming champion of Princeton university and star of the Exeter team of 1921. Other athletics were in charge of Director Withington; Marion A. Cheek, the Exeter football and baseball star; Joshua A. Davis, an all round athlete at Exeter, and Benjamin T. Davis, director of athletics at the University school in East Orange, N. J.

Mrs. John A. Schroeder had charge of the nature study. The dining hall was in charge of Miss McCarthy of Boston for the third year and she was assisted by Miss Lois Curtis and Miss Charlotte Kummel, both
Mt. Holyoke girls.

Camp Andover is under the auspices of the Boston City Mission and Rev. Fletcher
Parker had direct oversight of the camp finances. Any boy or girl may attend and while a nominal charge is made it does not meet the expense, the deficit being met by voluntary contributions.

The girls camp was in charge of Miss Sarah Chase who was at Camp Andover last year under Miss Esther Parker, now Mrs.
Sidney Lovett, with Miss Carita Bigelow of this town as assistant director and a very capable corps of counselors.

They were Miss Helen Van Schagon, Miss Jessie Townsend and Miss Mildred Johnson, an old Camp Andover girl, all of Dorchester;
Miss Marjorie Holmes and Miss Selma Jones of Boston; Miss Margaret Cellarins of Roslindale; Miss Lillian Olson of Concord and Miss Lena Pell of California. At the infirmity, a new building this year, Miss Olive Roberts of Medford was in charge and every care was afforded anyone who required medical attention.

The men counselors having charge of athletics were Benjamin Davis of Philadelphia and Rev. John Schroeder of Boston, and swimming instruction was given by William S.
Hayes of Montclair, N. J., and Fred Latimer of New London, Conn.

Gen. Wm. F. Bartlett Relief Corps Plans to Attend Meeting in Haverhill

The Essex County Association of the Woman's Relief Corps will meet with Corps
96 in Haverhill on Wednesday, September 13 at 10:30 a. m. in Grace M. E. church.
The annual silver collection will be taken at this meeting.

Members of the local corps are asked to notify Miss Sadie Hobbs at their earliest convenience if they intend to be present at the meeting so that provision may be made for their entertainment by the Haverhill corps.

Small boys have varied ambitions for the time when they are grown up, ranging from being a policeman to becoming President of the United States. Some aspire to be bootblacks, firemen, locomotive engineers, or another Charlie Chaplin. But a new hero has arisen on the horizon of Andover youngsters—"Chappie."

Some small boys on Main street, busy with sand and other fascinating materials, were heard to say "I want to be Chappie.
You can be Chappie any longer. That isn't the way he talks."

If Main street is interesting to the grown-ups, it is equally so to the small boys. There are the wonderful piles of sand, bricks, paving stones, ties, and rails, not to mention trucks dumping new material and marvelous machinery with something doing every minute.

If one were Chappie he could ride up and down Main street in the yellow gig drawn by the intelligent white horse that "stands without hitching" oblivious of steam roller, cement mixer, grouting machine or blasting, unless left too long without attention when he may start on an independent tour of inspection. One could dig great holes in Main street, supervise the mixing of mammoth mud pies or even take a hand with the broom at sweeping the cement across the paving stones or at rearranging the cover of Roger's brook.

Even without the vision of the perfect roadway destined to bear raw materials brought from the four quarters of the globe,
the manufactured products of great mills, food stuffs for thousands of workers and pleasure cars in untold numbers, no wonder Chappie's job has an appeal.

Such goings on as there have been this week on Main street between Chestnut street and Elm square. The steam shovel has shoveled at top speed, a whole procession of trucks and dump-carts struggling to carry away the material which it has lifted from the roadbed by the ton. Workmen with picks and shovels, spurred on to frantic haste by the vociferous orders of the contractor, have added their Lilliputian efforts to those of the steam shovel. So devastating were their combined efforts that temporary bridges and plank walks had to be provided for pedestrians who were so daringly reckless as to choose to do shopping or attend to any business which required them to cross the yawning chasms on Main street.

The culvert over Rogers brook was finished on the east side early last week, but manholes and conduits for electric wires have required extensive excavations. Blasting has added to the excitement.

One of the most spectacular feats accomplished by the steam shovel was the loading of the elm tree stumps onto trucks and drays to be carried to the dump. The circus is tame compared with it! One of the stumps had been sawed in two and its transfer from the roadway to the truck was a comparatively simple matter. To be sure, the shovel did make several wild efforts before the huge junk was successfully impaled upon its ravenous teeth. More than a mouthful, it balanced with a nicety as the shovel rose over the side of the truck. The load was too bulky to be discharged in the usual manner;

the shovel paused, gave a vicious shake, dislodging the huge bulk, and with a final poke sent it tumbling into the truck.

Even the steam shovel seemed dwarfed when it tackled a whole elm stump. Having entangled its teeth in the chain which girded the stump it proceeded to lift it from the ground—oh so slowly! The stump reluctantly rose, resisting to such a degree that the rear wheels of the shovel carriage were lifted from the ground. Nothing daunted, the shovel lifted and lifted until its burden was safely deposited on the dray with its great weight over the rear axle. Once more it was lifted to be blocked up by ties so that wheels would be left free and away it went to the dump where it is said to have taken an hour and a half to unload it.

The constant mixer is telling down the east side of Main street, progress having been made as far as Buchanan's garage. The paving lags, still lacking 200 feet on the west side.

The new switch is in place opposite the Andover Press and ties and rails are being laid toward the north. The bus has taken up its station at the corner of High street.

Thursday morning the big elm in front of the Town house began to come down.
Passers-by viewed the process with varied sensations; some rejoiced; a few, we believe, shed tears. Under the steady rasping of the saw limb after limb thundered and crashed to the ground. One struck a fire alarm wire and sounded the death knell of the old tree. The removal of the main trunk and stump is still to be accomplished.

The four mysterious looking boxes which appeared on Main street yesterday are the moulds for the cement bases for the electric light standards. Thirty-six of these are to be constructed between Chestnut street and the top of the hill and work was begun on them today.

dave mills at the world's fair in 1893, being medal award to the mills for the excellence of its flannel exhibit, he having been in charge of the manufacturing of the cloth.

He was born in Saultcoast, Scotland, and came to America in 1866. For a time he was em-

Local Boy Scouts Lose to Troop No. One of Cambridge

Troop No. 1 of Cambridge were the victors over the local Boy Scouts in a loosely played game of baseball on the local playstead

Tuesday evening.

In the first inning the boys from Cambridge started off with a bang, getting a number of safe hits and scoring seven runs.

In the local Scouts' half of the first inning they were shut out, owing to the pitching of Morrell of Troop No. 1.

In the second inning Bub Lawrence relieved Clyde Mears as pitcher, as he was suffering with a sore finger, received while practising before the game. He held the visitors down to two hits which resulted in two runs owing to the poor fielding of the local players. In the local boys' half of the second inning they scored eight runs,

Morrell, the Troop No. 1 pitcher, passing three men, which, with the aid of a couple of hits by Ed Grealish and Bill Bonner, and a couple of errors by the visitors, brought the score nine to eight in favor of the Cambridge boys.

The game ended at the end of the fourth inning with the score 12 to 11 in favor of the Cambridge boys, the last out being Bub

Lawrence tried to steal home, at which time he sprained his ankle, which necessitated

first aid treatment given by Scout Master

Downe, assisted by E. Morrill. Another game will be played Saturday afternoon at 8 o'clock. The lineup:

Southernland 3b., Ray Parker s.s., p., E.

SYNOPSIS

I-APRIL.—General factotum in the house of her sister Ina, wife of Herbert Deacon, in the small town of Warblington. Lulu Bett leads a dull, cramped existence, with which she is contentedly at odds, though apparently satisfied with her lot. She has natural thoughts and aspirations which neither her sister nor her brother-in-law seem to comprehend. To Mr. Deacon comes Bobby Larkin, recently graduated high-school youth, secretly enamored of Deacon's elder daughter, Diana, an applicant for a "job" around the Deacon house. He is engaged, his occupation to be to keep the lawn in trim. The family is excited over the news of an approaching visit from Deacon's brother Ninian, whom he had not seen for many years. Deacon jokes with Lulu, with subtle meaning, concerning the coming meeting.

II-MAY.—Chiefly because of the ripple in her placid, colorless existence which the arrival of Ninian will bring, Lulu is interested and speculative. Meanwhile watching with something like envy the boy-and-girl love-making of Bobby and Diana. Unexpectedly, Ninian arrives, in the absence of Herbert, at his business, and of Ina, retiring. Thus he becomes acquainted with Lulu first and in a measure understands her position in the house. To Lulu, Ninian is a much-traveled man of the world and even the slight interest which he takes in her is appreciated, because it is something new in her life.

III-JUNE.—At an evening which the family takes, Ninian and Lulu become in a measure confidential. He expresses his disapproval of her treatment as a sort of dependant in the Deacon home. Lulu has vaguely had the same thoughts, but her loyalty to her sister and her own diffidence make Ninian's comments embarrassing. He declares his intention of giving the family a "good time" in the city before he leaves. Diana and Bobby, in the course of "soft nothings," discuss the possibility of eloping and "surprising the whole school." Lulu, despite herself, has awakened to pleasant possibilities concerning Ninian's intentions toward herself, the more so because hitherto she has been a practical nonentity in the household, having little to do with the simple social functions. The fact that Ninian had walked home with her causes all sorts of speculations to disturb her slumbers that night.

IV-JULY.—Ninian redeems his promise of a "good time," and dinner in the adjacent city, with the attentions shown her by her brother-in-law, is a delight to Lulu. At supper, after the theater, the conversation languishes, and Herbert banteringly suggests reading the funeral service as a rebuke for the dullness. Ninian apparently jokingly urges the substitution of the wedding service, himself and Lulu participating. As part of the joke Lulu repeats the words of the civil ceremony, with Ninian. The laughter subsiding, Herbert remembers that a civil wedding is binding in the state, and inasmuch as he is a minister, Ninian and Lulu are legally wedded. "The rest of the party is shocked, but Ninian declares he is perfectly satisfied. Lulu is dumfounded but secretly happy. She and Ninian depart at once for their honeymoon, without returning to Warblington. The Deacons lose no time spreading the news in the home town, though the services of Lulu are sadly missed in the household.

They could see that she was dressed well, in dark red cloth, with a little tilting hat and a drooping veil. She did not seem in any wise upset, nor, save for that nervous laughter, did she show her excitement.

"Well, but he's here with you, isn't he?" Dwight demanded. "Isn't he here? Where is he?"

"Must be 'most to Oregon by this time," Lulu said.

"Oregon!"

"You see," said Lulu, "he had another wife."

"Why, he had not?" exclaimed Dwight absurdly.

"Yes, he hasn't seen her for fifteen years and he thinks she's dead. But he isn't sure."

"Nonsense," said Dwight. "Why, of course she's dead if he thinks so."

"I had to be sure," said Lulu.

At first dumb before this, Ina now cried out: "Monona! Go upstairs to bed at once."

"It's only quarter to," said Monona, with assurance.

"Do as mamma tells you."

"But—"

"Monona!"

She went, kissing them all good-night and taking her time about it. Everything was suspended while she kissed them and departed, walking slowly backward.

"Married!" said Mrs. Bett with sturdy apprehension. "Lulu, was your husband married?"

"Yes," Lulu said, "my husband was married, mother."

"Mercy," said Ina. "Think of anything like that in our family."

"Well, go on—go on!" Dwight cried. "Tell us about it."

Lulu spoke in a monotone, with her old manner of hesitation:

"We were going to Oregon. First down to New Orleans and then out to California and up the coast." On this she paused and sighed. "Well, then at Savannah, Georgia, he said he thought I better know, first. So he told me."

"Yes—well, what did he say?" Dwight demanded irritably.

"Cora Waters," said Lulu. "Cora Waters. She married him down in San Diego, eighteen years ago. She went to South America with him."

"Well, he never let us know of it, if she did," said Dwight.

"No. She married him just before he went. Then in South America, after two years, she ran away again. That's all he knows."

"That's a pretty story," said Dwight contemptuously.

"He says if she'd been alive, she'd been after him for a divorce. And she never has been, so he thinks she must be dead. The trouble is," Lulu said again, "he wasn't sure. And I had to be sure."

"Well, but mercy," said Ina, "couldn't he find out now?"

"It might take a long time," said Lulu simply, "and I didn't want to stay and not know."

"Well, then, why didn't he say so here?" Ina's indignation mounted.

"He would have. But you know how sudden everything was. He said he thought about telling us right there in the restaurant, but of course that'd been hard—wouldn't it? And then he felt so sure she was dead."

"Why did he tell you at all, then?" demanded Ina, whose processes were simple.

"Yes, well! Why indeed?" Dwight Herbert brought out these words with a curious emphasis.

"I thought that, just at first," Lulu said, "but only just at first. Of course that wouldn't have been right. And then, you see, he gave me my choice."

"Gave you your choice?" Dwight echoed.

"Yes. About going on and taking the chance. He gave me my choice when he told me, there in Savannah, Georgia."

"What made him conclude, by then, that you ought to be told?" Dwight asked.

"Why, he'd got to thinking about it," she answered.

A silence fell. Lulu sat looking out toward the street.

"The only thing," she said, "as long as it happened, I kind of wish he hadn't told me till we got out to Oregon."

"Lulu!" said Ina. Ina began to cry. "You poor thing!" she said.

Her tears were a signal to Mrs. Bett, who had been striving to understand all. Now she too wept, tossing up her hands and rocking her body. Her saucer and spoon clattered on her knee.

"He felt bad, too," Lulu said.

"He!" said Dwight. "He must have."

"It's you," Ina sobbed. "It's you. My sister!"

"Well," said Lulu, "but I never thought of it making you both feel bad, or I wouldn't have come home. I knew," she added, "it'd make Dwight feel bad. I mean, it was his brother—"

"Thank goodness," Ina broke in, "nobody need know about it."

Lulu regarded her, without change.

"Oh, yes," she said in her monotone. "People will have to know."

"I do not see the necessity," Dwight's voice was on edge. Then too he said "do not," always with Dwight betokening the finalities.

"Why, what would they think?" Lulu asked, troubled.

"What difference does it make what they think?"

"Why," said Lulu slowly, "I shouldn't like—you see they might—why, Dwight, I think we'll have to tell them."

"You do! You think the disgrace of bigamy in this family is something the whole town will have to know about?"

Lulu looked at him with parted lips.

"Say," she said, "I never thought about it being that."

Dwight laughed. "What do you think it was? And whose disgrace is it, pray?"

"Ninian's!" said Lulu. "Well, he's gone. But you're here. And I'm here. Folks'll feel sorry for you. But the disgrace—that'd reflect on me. See?"

"But if we don't tell, what'll they think then?"

Said Dwight: "They'll think what they always think when a wife leaves her husband. They'll think you couldn't get along. That's all."

"I should hate that," said Lulu.

"Well, I should hate the other, let me tell you."

"Dwight, Dwight," said Ina. "Let's go in the house. I'm afraid they'll hear—"

As they rose, Mrs. Bett plucked at her returned daughter's sleeve.

"Lulu," she said, "was his other wife—was she there?"

"No, no, mother. She wasn't there."

Mrs. Bett's lips moved, repeating the words. "Then that ain't so bad," she said. "I was afraid maybe she turned you out."

"No," Lulu said, "it wasn't that bad, mother."

Mrs. Bett brightened. In little matters, she quailed and resented, but the large issues left her blank.

Through some indeterminate sense of the importance due this crisis, the Deacons entered their parlor. Dwight fought that high, central burner and lighted about, saying:

"In fact, I simply will not have it, Lulu! You expect, I take it, to make your home with us in the future, on the old terms."

"Well—"

"I mean, did Ninian give you any money?"

"No. He didn't give me any money—only enough to get home on. And I kept my suit—why!" she sang her head back, "I wouldn't have taken any money!"

"That means," said Dwight, "that you will have to continue to live here—on the old terms, and of course I'm quite willing that you should. Let me tell you, however, that this is on condition—an condition that this disgraceful business is kept to ourselves."

She made no attempt to combat him now. She looked back at him, quivering and in a great surprise, but she said nothing.

"Truly, Lulu," said Ina, "wouldn't that be best? They'll talk anyway. But this way they'll only talk about you, and the other way it'd be about all of us."

Lulu said only: "But the other way would be the truth."

Dwight's eyes narrowed: "My dear Lulu," he said, "are you sure of that?"

"Sure?"

"Yes. Did he give you any proofs?"

"Proofs?"

"Letters—documents of any sort? Any sort of assurance that he was speaking the truth?"

"Why, no," said Lulu. "Proofs—no. He told me."

"He told you?"

"Why that was hard enough to have to do. It was terrible for him to have to do. What proofs—" She stopped, puzzled.

"Didn't it occur to you," said Dwight, "that he might have told you that because he didn't want to have to go on with it?"

As she met his look some power seemed to go from Lulu. She sat down, looked weakly at them, and with her closed lips her jaw was slightly fallen. She said nothing. And seeing on her skirt a spot of dust she began to rub at that.

"Why, Dwight!" Ina cried, and moved to her sister's side.

"I may as well tell you," he said, "that I myself have no idea that Ninian told you the truth. He was always imagining things—you saw that. I know him pretty well—have been more or less in touch with him the whole time. In short, I haven't the least idea he was ever married before."

Lulu continued to rub at her skirt.

"I never thought of that," she said.

"Look here," Dwight went on persuasively, "hadn't you and he had some little tiff when he told you?"

"No—no! Why, not once. Why, weren't a bit like you and Ina?"

She spoke simply and from her heart, and without guile.

"Evidently not," Dwight said dryly.

Lulu went on: "He was very good to me. This dress—and my shoes—and my hat. And another dress, too."

She found the pins and took off her hat. "He liked the red wing," she said.

"I wanted black—oh, Dwight! He did tell me the truth!" It was as if the red wing had abruptly borne mute witness.

Dwight's tone now mounted. His manner, it mounted too.

"Even if it is true," said he, "I desire that you should keep silent and protect my family from this scandal. I merely mention my doubts to you for your own profit."

"My own profit!"

She said no more, but rose and moved to the door.

"Lulu—you see! With Di and all!" Ina begged. "We just couldn't have this known—even if it was so."

"You have it in your hands," said Dwight, "to repay me, Lulu, for anything that you feel I may have done for you in the past. You also have it in your hands to decide whether your home here continues. That is not a pleasant position for me to find myself in. It is distinctly unpleasant."

I may say. But you see for yourself."

Lulu went on, into the passage.

"Wasn't she married when she thought she was?" Mrs. Bett cried shrilly.

"Mamma," said Ina. "Do please, remember Monona. Yes—Dwight thinks she's married all right now—and that it's all right, all the time."

"Well, I hope so, for pity sakes," said Mrs. Bett, and left the room with her daughter.

Hearing the stir, Monona upstairs lifted her voice:

"Mamma! Come on and hear my prayers, why don't you?"

When they came downstairs next morning, Lulu had breakfast ready.

"Well!" cried Ina in her curving tones. "If this isn't like old times."

Lulu said yes, it was like old times, and brought the bacon to the table.

"Lulu's the only one in this house can cook the bacon so's it'll chew."

Mrs. Bett volunteered. She was wholly affable, and held contentedly to Ina's last word that Dwight thought now it was all right.

"Ho!" said Dwight. "The happy family, once more about the festive toaster." He gauged the moment to call for good cheer. Ina, too, became breezy, blithe. Monona caught their spirit and laughed, head thrown well back and gently shaken.

Di came in. She had been told that Auntie Lulu was at home, and that she, Di, wasn't to say anything to her about anything, nor anything to anybody else about Auntie Lulu being back. Under these prohibitions, Di loosed a thousand speculations. Di was very nearly paralyzed. She stared at her Aunt Lulu incessantly.

Not one of them had even a talent for the casual, save Lulu herself. Lulu was amazingly herself. She took her old place, assumed her old office. When Monona declared against bacon, it was Lulu who suggested milk toast and went to make it.

"Mamma," Di whispered then, like escaping steam, "isn't Uncle Ninian coming too?"

"Hush. No. Now don't ask any more questions."

"Well, can't I tell Bobby and Jenny she's here?"

"No. Don't say anything at all about her."

"But, mamma. What has she done?"

"Di! Do as mamma tells you. Don't you think mamma knows best?"

Di of course did not think so, had not thought so for a long time. But now Dwight said:

"Daughter! Are you a little girl or are you our grown-up young lady?"

"I don't know," said Di reasonably, "but I think you're treating me like a little girl now."

"Shame, Di," said Ina, unabashed.

"Lulu," said Dwight, "has us to stand by her."

Lulu, walking down the main street, thought:

"Now Mr. Chambers is seeing me. Now Mr. Curtis. There's somebody behind the vines at Mr. Martin's. Here comes Mr. Grove and I've got to speak to her . . ."

One and another and another met her, and every one cried out at her some version of:

"Lulu Bett!" Or, "Well, it isn't Lulu Bett any more, is it? Well, what are you doing here? I thought . . ."

"I'm back to stay," she said.

"The idea! Well, where you hiding that handsome husband of yours? Say, but we were surprised! You're the shy one—"

"My—Mr. Deacon isn't here."

"Oh."

"No. He's West."

"Oh, I see."

Having no arts, she must needs let the conversation die like this, could invent nothing concealing or gracious on which to move away.

She went to the post office. It was early, there were few at the post office—with only one or two there had she to go through her examination. Then she went to the general delivery window, tence for a new order.

To her relief, the face which was shown there was one strange to her, a slim youth, reading a letter of his own, and smiling.

"Excuse me," said Lulu faintly.

The youth looked up, with eyes warmed by the words on the pink paper which he held.

"Could you give me the address of Mr. Ninian Deacon?"

"Let's see—you mean Dwight Deacon, I guess?"

"No. It's his brother. He's been here. From Oregon. I thought he might have given you his address—" she dwindled away.

"Wait a minute," said the youth. "Nope. No address here. Say, why don't you send it to his brother? He'd know. Dwight Deacon, the dentist."

"I'll do that," Lulu said absurdly, and turned away.

She went back up the street, walking fast now to get away from them all. Once or twice she pretended not to see a familiar face. But when she passed the mirror in an insurance office window, she saw her reflection and at its appearance she felt surprise and pleasure.

"Well!" she thought, almost in Ina's own manner.

Abruptly her confidence rose.

Something of this confidence was still upon her when she returned. They were in the dining room now, all save Di, who was on the porch with Bobby, and Monona, who was in bed and might be heard extravagantly singing.

Lulu sat down with her hat on. When Dwight inquired playfully, "Don't we look like company?" she did not reply. He looked at her speculatively. Where had she gone, with whom had she talked, what had she told? Ina looked at her rather fearfully. But Mrs. Bett rocked contentedly and ate cardamom seeds.

My place to put you in touch with him again."

"You won't give it to me?"

"My dear Lulu, in all kindness—no."

His Ina came running back, bearing handkerchiefs with different colored borders for him to choose from. He chose the initial that she had embroidered, and had not the good taste not to kiss her.

They were all on the porch that evening, when Lulu came downstairs.

"Where are you going?" Ina demanded, sisterly. And on hearing that Lulu had an errand, added still more sisterly: "Well, but mercy, what you so dressed up for?"

Lulu was in a thin black and white gown which they had never seen, and wore the tilting hat with the red wing.

"Ninian bought me this," Lulu only said.

"But, Lulu, don't you think it might be better to keep well-out of sight for a few days?" Ina's lifted look besought her.

"Why?" Lulu asked.

"Why set people wondering till we have to?"

"They don't have to wonder, far as I'm concerned," said Lulu, and went down the walk.

Ina looked at Dwight. "She never spoke to me like that in her life before," she said.

She watched her sisters black and white figure going directly down the street.

"That gives me the funniest feeling," said Ina, "as if Lulu had on clothes bought for her by some one that wasn't—that was—"

"By her husband who has left her," said Dwight sadly.

"Is that what it is, papa?" Di asked alertly. For a wonder, she was there; had been there the greater part of the day—most of the time staring, fascinated, at her Aunt Lulu.

"That's what it is, my little girl," said Dwight, and shook his head.

"Well, I think it's a shame," said Di stoutly. "And I think Uncle Ninian is a sludge."

"Di!"

"I do. And I'd be ashamed to think anything else. I'd like to tell everybody."

"There is," said Dwight, "no need for secrecy—now."

"Dwight!" said Ina—Ina's eyes always remained expressionless, but it must have been her lashes that looked so startled.

"No need whatever for secrecy," he repeated with firmness. "The truth is Lulu's husband has tired of her and sent her home. We must face it."

"But, Dwight—how awful for Lulu!"

"Lulu," said Dwight, "has us to stand by her."

Lulu, walking down the main street, thought:

"Now Mr. Chambers is seeing me. Now Mr. Curtis. There's somebody behind the vines at Mr. Martin's. Here comes Mr. Grove and I've got to speak to her . . ."

One and another and another met her, and every one cried out at her some version of:

READY FOR BOWLS FINALS

George Fyfe Enters Finals for Matthew Burns Cup by Defeating Gordon 21 to 20 in Record Match

By disposing of William Gordon in a record match on the Shawshreen Bowling Green, George Fyfe enters the final and will meet Richard Kayley for the beautiful challenge cup donated by Matthew Burns.

The semi-final was a record and it took 27 ends to decide the winner, so close was the bowling between Fyfe and Gordon. Both bowlers were in fine form and fought for every point. Billy won the first end but Fyfe tied 4 to 1. Gordon then lay 3 and 2 in succession and took the lead for the only time in the match.

George got a 2, 1 and 3 and at the 10th end led by 5. A 2 and 3 brought Gordon back, but Fyfe sent down some fine shots and at the 16th end led 15-10. Gordon, however, refused to give up and with a 2 at the 17th and a 3 at the 19th; was within one of Fyfe.

From then on it was a battle royal. Fyfe counted 2 at the 20th, making his total 18, but Gordon evened up at 22nd end. Fyfe then brought his score to within one of a win, but Gordon scoring 1 each at the 23rd and 24th ends, tied his opponent. The 27th end decided. Fyfe had one counting when Billy bowled his last shot. He failed to do damage and Fyfe with a shot to spare ran out at the 27th end a winner 21 to 20.

It was the bitterest struggle seen on the green and Fyfe thoroughly earned his right to enter the final, the date of which has not yet been decided.

Monster Field Day Being Planned

The cinder track that is being laid around the Shawshreen Athletic field will be completed in the very near future and a monster field day is being planned for Saturday, September 30.

There will be open and closed events, races, tug of war, etc. It is planned to make the affair the biggest of its kind held in the vicinity and the committee is working earnestly to make it a success.

Suitable prizes will be awarded. A detailed program will be announced later.

In connection with the activities of the Association it is planned to form a soccer team which will join the Industrial Soccer League.

Resolutions Passed

The Directors of the Shawshreen Mills passed the following resolutions on August 25:

Resolved—That the directors of the Shawshreen Mills record their profound sense of loss to the company in the passing of their fellow-member, William M. Wood, Jr. His all-to-brief term of service has been an inspiration. His devotion to the best interests of the company and of its employees, his brilliant intellect, his sincerity of purpose, his moral fearlessness, his prophetic vision, combined to make him a powerful influence in promoting the spirit of loyal, courageous and cooperative workmanship.

They also desire to record here an abiding sense of personal sorrow in the loss of a true friend and a happy comrade.

"Conductor," screamed the woman who carried many bundles, as she passed the platform of a crowded street car. "I thought I told you that I wanted to get off at Kenwood avenue!"

"But madam—" began the conductor.

"Don't you say a word! I know all about your car being full and about you not being able to remember where everybody gets off. I have heard all that before!"

"But madam—" again commenced the poor conductor.

"You may be sure," poured on the woman, "I shall report you for your impudence, too." She alighted and the car started up again.

Then the conductor touched his cap and for the first time being able to get a word or two in sideways, respectfully called after the woman being left behind:

"Very sorry, madam, but Kenwood avenue is half a mile farther on."

The Story of Our States

By JONATHAN BRACE
XII—WASHINGTON

THE story of Washington, the forty-second state of the Union, is tied up with two of our present-day events. The first is obvious, for it was in honor of our first president, George Washington, that the state was named, as a last memorial to this great soldier-statesman. But the actual date of this action was due to President Polk, and formed the main issue in his campaign for election in 1844.

Previous to that time, the country north of California and extending to Alaska, which was then owned by Russia, was called the Oregon territory. Claim was laid to this region by both Great Britain and the United States as has been seen in the story of Oregon. In 1818, when the boundary between Canada and the United States was settled, this line was definitely placed from the Atlantic coast to the Rocky mountains. But no agreement could be reached west of that, and it was left under an arrangement whereby this territory was to be jointly occupied by the British and Americans.

Settlers from the United States began to come into the Northwest in such numbers that the United States felt that they should own this section, which included the present states of Oregon and Washington, and British Columbia, through the right of possession. Agitation in favor of actively pushing our claims became so strong that when Polk was nominated by the Democrats in 1844, one of the main planks in the party platform was the famous one popularly called, "Fifty-four forty or fight."

In 1846 a peaceful settlement was made with England on a compromise basis.

In 1853 Washington territory was separated from Oregon. It did not, however, become a state until 1889, and then only after thirteen years petitioning for admission.

SOME SOCCER SOON

Six Teams Comprise League Which Will Meet on Balmoral Playing Fields During Fall Season

Secretary John Haggas is extending himself to the limit in order to get the Industrial Soccer League going by the middle of September. The last two weeks have been busy ones for the secretary in the efforts of building up the league for the coming season. He has been in close touch with several of the leading soccer clubs in the state to whom he has extended a cordial invitation to join the industrial enterprise which has already met with satisfactory results.

The following teams have now entered the league: American Woolen, Abbot Worsted, Massachusetts Cotton, General Electric, Arlington Mills, Fore River.

It is reported that John Dundas, the American Woolen player of last season, will most likely be seen wearing an Abbot Worsted uniform this coming season; however, this story would be more authentic should he apply his signature to a registration form; this is a time when many rumors commence to circulate.

The athletic field in Shawshreen Village is at the present time undergoing some changes, a cinder track being made around it, but it is expected that it will be completed by the time the soccer season commences. The coming season is looked forward to by soccer enthusiasts in the village and it is hoped that some fine soccer will be seen on this field.

Offers $500 Reward

A reward of $500 has been offered by William M. Wood, president of the American Woolen Company, for the return of a pocketbook belonging to his son, the late William M. Wood, Jr.

The pocketbook and its contents were lost at the time of the accident on the Reading road, August 15. Mr. Wood will pay the reward for its return and no questions will be asked.

Carries Optimistic Business Message Abroad

Before sailing for England, Paris and Germany on the S. S. Mauretania, W. C. Rutherford, Vice President of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company, who is accompanied on his trip by L. D. Brown, Treasurer of the company, explained to the newspaper men who gathered to see him off, that his trip was not a vacation. "I haven't had a vacation for many years," he said. "I have to make my work my recreation, though I am mighty careful that every Goodrich employee under my direction takes an annual vacation. No, the Goodrich Company has a large subsidiary factory just outside of Paris and one of the reasons of my trip abroad is to spend some time at that plant."

The Mauretania carried away with it a radiant optimism as to American business conditions when it carried Mr. Rutherford away. "A full tide of unprecedented prosperity is setting in throughout the United States," he says. "I have never seen a brighter outlook nor more hopeful conditions. The minor disorders we have been having in the way of strikes will soon be satisfactorily settled and forgotten; the air will be the clearer; the straight road ahead that is leading us to prosperity will be unimpeded."

Of course, while I speak generally of conditions in all lines of business, it is the rubber business I know best and about which I am the most competent to speak. But I think you can take the Goodrich Rubber Company as a very fair indication of what is going on, perhaps in a minor way, in a great majority of industries. We, for instance, have been so busy supplying an ever increasing market that we find the twenty-four hour day all too short. We are obliged to have three sets of employees working in three shifts of eight hours each.

"Competition in the rubber industry is keen but fair; and it has resulted in a vastly improved industry; an industry that cannot afford any loss of motion but which is constantly, by scientific management, cutting costs of production and thus effecting a tremendous saving for the buying public. And I should like the public to realize what a tremendous basic industry the rubber industry is. How largely it enters into the life and industry and convenience of the nation is evidenced by the fact that rubber is largely used in practically every form of transportation, in surgical goods, footwear, trains, aeroplanes, buggies, gas engines, automobiles, electric apparatus, radio, building construction, toilet articles, household wear, etc. And the uses of rubber are growing daily."

How fast the rubber industry is taking its place as one of America's industrial leaders may be judged from the fact that in last month our sales increased 150 percent over the month of April, and our May and June business, compared with May and June of last year, nearly doubled. Sales of cord tires since January of this year have been double those of the first five months, and at this moment our sales are running higher than ever before in the history of Goodrich.

"And the future never looked brighter. I am sure that it is not too optimistic to look forward to the time when every industrious and intelligent working man will be able to afford a modest automobile. Production of the low-priced cars was never greater than it is today, and scientific competition is so healthy that no one is able to predict how cheaply a car may be put on the market tomorrow. The greater the output of cars the greater, of course, the demand for rubber tires and other automobile equipment. Prosperity in any one line means equal prosperity in all the related industries. So you can see, I'm sure, the sort of hopeful, encouraging message I am gladly carrying from the United States to England, France and Germany."

Of 3,000,000 persons living in the mountain countries of eight southern states, nine-tenths are of Anglo-Saxon pioneer stock, the purest blood in America today.

The shifting sands of the desert of Gobi are gradually burying large portions of the Great Wall of China.

A new method of keeping hay without curing it in the sun has been worked out in Switzerland. The newly mowed hay is stored on metal sheets in silos of 400 feet capacity. Another metal sheet closes the top of the silo and the two sheets are connected in an electric circuit, so an alternating current of from 200 to 500 volts is passed through the grass between them. This enables the grass to be preserved in its natural state until required, and it can be cut and stored irrespective of conditions and it contains twice the nutriment of an equal quantity of hay.

RIDE PILLION ON M.O.C.

Fair Riders Said to Be Deserting Sadie Horses for the Faster-Gaited Machine.

Have you seen the "pillion girl"? Not the demure, coy and shrinking maiden of years gone by, who rode "side-saddle" behind her swain on horseback, but the rollicking, daredevil knickered girl of today, perched precariously astride the extra seat on a motorcycle, bowling along the road at a 40-mile-an-hour clip.

Despite the wide dissimilarity in the style of riding, the name has persisted in England and the "pillion girls" have become so numerous in that country that recently the department on taxation and regulation of road vehicles sat in solemn convocation to decide whether the "pillion girl" is a source of danger to the general public, the New York Sun states.

It is not clear whether "general public" includes the pillion girl herself, or whether the term comprises merely the motorists of the opposite sex whose eyes are unaccountably distracted from the road by the sight of a pretty girl on the rear seat of a motorcycle, flaunting graceful, silk-clad legs, her hair flying in the wind.

In any event, the committee reports there is no appreciable amount of evidence to indicate that the practice is a source of danger to the general public. They are of the opinion that no case has been made out sufficiently strong to justify the prohibition of the practice.

On this side of the Atlantic the "pillion girl" is apparently safe from molestation. In fact, each year sees an increasing number of women operating their own motorcycles.

LOSE INTEREST IN SERENADE

Masculine Spaniards Said to Have Turned From Romance to the More Prosaic Football Game.

Sad, indeed, to lovers of the picturesque is the news which comes from Seville, Spain. The serenade, from time immemorial the quintessence of romance, is passing away and will soon be known no more. Worst of all, it is being destroyed by nothing else than modern and unromantic facts. This game is at present in full vogue in Spain. Everywhere young men are passionately addicted to it. In Seville as elsewhere, so that the young Sevillians have no longer time as formerly to cultivate the song, the guitar and the mandolin. Football engrosses them.

Soon one will not find a single lover capable of playing a serenade under the balcony of his Dulcinea. If Rosina opens her window Almagro will not be there to declare to her his passion. But lately, on Saturdays, the young Sevillians assembled and wandered through the streets of the town singing to the stars. Today they go to bed early so as to be the next morning in good form for their favorite game.

Services to Prevent Robberies.

Science, which has rendered us so many services, has now attacked a new problem. Inventors are pitilessly hunting the burglars of Paris. Many are now in search of means of defending the stores and banks against criminal attacks.

One of these most curious inventions consists of a pedal situated in the interior of the store. The burglar, if he watches the hands of the man, cannot at the same time see where he puts his feet. Then the pedal starts an electrical clockwork and at the same time an illuminated plate calling for the police appears on the outside of the store. Among the other inventions there is an overcoat with a special pocket for carrying a revolver. The weapon is so placed that when the attacked person facing the burglar raises his arms, the revolver is brought into position for firing and the act of raising his hands pulls a string which discharges it.

Liner Delayed to Save Life.

The value that we set on human life today has been dramatically illustrated by an incident on the Atlantic ocean.

An explosion in the engine-room of a freight ship caused terrible injuries to the second engineer, a young man named O'Neal. There was no doctor on board, so the captain sent out wireless calls for assistance.

Seven ships replied. In six cases doctors told the captain what treatment would be likely to give the best results.

But one passenger liner did more than this; it put 160 miles out of its course and sent a lifeboat with the ship's doctor in it, who attended to the patient and then had him transferred to his ship. When the liner reached England he was comfortable and on the way to recovery.

That's it. Mr. Wampoodle was trying to go plain. "You know what I mean. It's the play where they have the witch's cauldron." "Witches Cauldron." "Yeah." "Oh, yes, I know." "You mean the home brew sent from Macbeth."—Louisville Courier Journal.
